DRAFT OF RESEARCH PROPOSAL ON

CULTURE APPRAISAL

[redacted] By which we initiated our work with [redacted] and must rationalize for him.

The Problem:-

It is essential that American personnel engaged in communication with individuals or groups of a foreign country have a clear understanding of the "social character" of that country. In order to achieve such an understanding, the American, whether he be in business, in government or a tourist, must understand his own society and how it influences his perceptions and behavior. The task of developing this understanding has never been fully appreciated in the American culture, despite the fact that the social sciences have emphasized for many years the necessity for developing frames of reference, training programs, and specific guidance for behavior under given situations. How can the knowledge and skills of the social scientist be best applied to this critical, national problem?

Discussion

It is felt that the writings in the fields of cultural anthropology, sociology, social psychology, political science and economics contain adequate information at the present time to erect a theoretical framework for communicating to the neophyte in international affairs:

a. an understanding of current literature about his own or any foreign area

b. an understanding of the power and social structure of most areas of the world

c. a system for rapid assessment of the interplay between the various social and cultural forces in a given area

d. an improved appreciation of ways of exploiting these indigenous forces for his own purposes.

There have been attempts by the [redacted] and the [redacted] to develop training programs in the past based upon the above assumptions. The results have not been particulary noteworthy. Instructors working with the training programs have usually concluded that it was better to have no knowledge than to have incomplete knowledge. It was felt that short-term training in such a complicated area could at best produce only pseudo-sophistication which, in most cases, is more damaging than ignorance. The training efforts have been relegated to attempts to convey specific substance pertaining to events of a given area rather than attempts to provide a broad understanding. Further, officials of the [redacted] have surrendered their training programs to the theory that "experts" could be selected and employed to fill the needs of any given time. This has been true despite the fact that selection methods have tagged farther behind in scientific development than have culture appraisal methods or training methods.

Approaches to Solution:-

It is felt that the efficacy of short term training programs has never been fully tested. No concentrated attempt has been made to extract those portions of social science lore which can be readily assimilated by the neophyte and applied for his own use "on the job." As an experiment, it is proposed that the following be compiled for use in teaching a course in "culture assessment":

a. an integrated report covering the major literature on social character

b. an annotated bibliography appropriately categorizing major considerations in culture assessment

c. a reading guide for the student of International affairs to be broken down according to area

d. a brief report identifying major components of American national character to provide the base line for observations of other cultures

e. a similar report containing pertinent observations on the [redacted] character.

The assumption underlying the above documentation is that upon exposure to a systemitized method of observation providing base lines for comparison can in a comparitively short time equip an individual to engage in intercultural affairs with greater efficiency and consequently improved chances of success.

Recommendations:-

It is recommended that as a pretest, the above materials be compiled for use in an experimental training program of seven days for [redacted] being assigned with [redacted] It is further recommended that the proficiency of [redacted] who have undergone this training be carefully evaluated to determine whether it would be advisable to extend such training to other geographic areas.

MEMORANDUM FOR: [redacted]

SUBJECT : Project for the [redacted]

1. Your request for service from the [redacted] has been received and we will be glad to attempt to meet the requirements you have outlined. At this time, it is impossible to guarantee meeting the mid-September 1958 deadline, but every effort will be made to do so.

2. [redacted] of TSS/CD will act as my representative in implementing this project. It is hoped that you will feel completely free to offer whatever advice, guidance and planning is necessary to insure that this activity will meet your needs.

3. It is suggested that [redacted] contact [redacted] as soon as practicable in order to formulate the project plan for my final approval.

Project for the [redacted]

1. I am in the process of surveying the needs of the [redacted] in order to provide you with the general types of assistance I should like to have from the [redacted]

2. In the meantime, however, there is one project I should like to request, to be undertaken at the earliest practical moment, and completed by mid-September, 1958. This project concerns the development of a package which can be used in the training of the [redacted] to enhance his understanding of his own and other cultures. The ability to develop favorable relationships with individuals in a foreign country is clearly a basic requirement for the [redacted] Such an understanding should be based upon a knowledge of:

a. American social character and how it influences the way the American looks at himself, at foreigners, and at many different phases of his living.

b. The social character of the country to which the [redacted] is being assigned, and how it will influence the attitudes and values of the natives of that country.

3. More specifically, it is requested that two packages be produced, one for American culture, and one for [redacted] culture, from a survey of available knowledge which will contain the following things for each culture:

a. An integrated report covering the major literature on social character.

b. A bibliography of the major literature categorized in some appropriate fashion with a summary of the major points covered in each area.

c. A listing and brief description of major readings which would be most useful to the beginning student.

[redacted]

[redacted] 88-1

SUBJECT: Project for the [redacted] B

4. As rough guide lines, it is suggested that the integrated report include a description of the different approaches which have been used to study American social character, or any parts thereof, and examples of representative findings which have resulted from each approach. For example, the integrated report might include a discussion of the more general attitudes and values related to American social character, attitudes and values associated with social class, and attitudes and values associated with personality organization. Illustrations of the three different levels might include attitudes towards foreign and ethnic groups, patterns of up-mobility strivings associated with a particular social class, and motivation studies at the need level, such as the belongingness needs associated with certain aspects of conformity behavior.

5. Because of the time limitations involved, it is clear that the initial packages need not be based on exhaustive survey of the literature, but more on a representative survey.

6. If the [redacted] B is willing to undertake this project, the Chief, [redacted] G [redacted] will discuss with your representative the G people who might be persuaded to undertake it. Among those to be considered would be [redacted] at the [redacted] C/B
