1. Interrogation techniques, other than conventional psychological interrogation, but without the use of physical duress, can be used effectively in:

a. Loyalty testing.

b. Obtaining intelligence.

c. Furnishing evidence for the conviction of criminals or defense of the innocent.

The application of techniques would be the same for the above three kinds of interrogation with few exceptions, such as may be encountered in espionage, including subversive use. The methods of interrogation, i.e., the actual questioning, requires special training for each of the three kinds of interrogation.

Loyalty testing and obtaining intelligence in certain operations are of primary importance now. This can be accomplished by the appointment of a team of men qualified in: Psychological interrogation; the use of the polygraph; the administration of drugs, and the induction of subconscious isolation. The use of electronic technique might be advisable if conditions indicate the need.

2. The following names are suggested for assignment to the proposed team, or as sources of qualified personnel:

[redacted]

[redacted]

Other individuals with a knowledge of the use of hypnosis are the following:

[redacted]

[redacted]

Other men with extensive knowledge in electric shock are: [redacted]

[redacted]

The names of other men have been suggested by Dr. Chadwell.

4. If these men are not available for administrative purposes to direct CIA program, the following might be given consideration.

[redacted]

5. The following three men would render excellent service in guerrilla activities:

[redacted]

