Theware all stated in an offensive aspect, but every one has a defensive aspect which i of equal or greater importance to the national security.I

1) Eliciting of Information by interrogation or otherwise

a) Witting - Conditions varying with amount of control freedom to use duress

b). Unwitting -(Usually under conditionsof no control) Conditions can vary from the Pretext Interview to Administration of drugs unknown to subject.

2) Detection of the Bona Fides or Basic Veracity of the Individual.
(A problem with all persons that we may wish to use.)

a) Potential Agents

b) Defectors

c) Refugees

d) POW

e) Others

3) Inducing a person to perform acts (short or long term) which he normally could not be expected to perform. (Assertion of control over and above that of normal social relationships.)
This will take the following forms:

a) Subverting from principles - This may vary from Rationalizing a disloyal ac

Construction of a new perso

b) The performance of long range acts unaccompanied by the presence of a controlling officer-(Means could be drugs hypnosis or any combination???)

c) The performance of a certain behavior pattern unaccompanied by the presence of a controlling officer.

d) The establishment of dormant controls in an individual which can be penetrat (Are there effective human post-hypnotic control methods?)

e) Insulate the individual from his surroundings or condition himso that he can withstand pressures which he normally would not be expected to withsta

f) Blot out conscious knowledge of past acts.

In appraising Soviet operational success in one or more of these areas, a firm state is needed that