Unknown Soviet Drug

At an American OPS house, run by [redacted] in 1949, seven Soviet defectos were given an unknown poison by a Soviet agent who escaped. The victims were saved by prompt medical attention, but they had recurrent milder attacks. [redacted] who began getting symptoms of her fatal illness shortly after the event, died recently apparently. Examinations at [redacted] clinics identified sickness as multiple sclerosis. The autopsy contradicted the analysis but failed to identify the illness which caused partial dissolution of brain tissues. Now [redacted] husband, [redacted], is developing similar symptoms. Request is made to locate the seven defectors and find out what has happened to them.
