SUBJECT: SI and H Experimentation, 4 March 1953

On Wednesday, 4 March 1953, [redacted] and the writer conducted SI and H experimentation with [redacted] and [redacted]. This session was the first session with both subjects although [redacted] had made some previous tests with [redacted]. Since this was the first work carried on by these subjects, the standard inductions were run and both responded excellently. It apparently appears that both subjects were capable of more advanced work and both subjects reached a deep sleep state on the first attempt. Thereafter, both subjects were inducted several times during the evening and obtained a deeper and better reaction so that some basic movements and amnesia tests were tried and worked successfully. It is the opinion of [redacted] and the writer that both will make very excellent subjects. They are quite young, extremely interested and appear to be very suggestible and capable of advanced work without much more preliminary conditioning.
